

“Look Where the Sun DON'T Shine!”

-Frank 1964-2017

Frank spent a lot of time in the sun but didn't think to look behind his back. A melanoma, the deadliest form of skin cancer, was hiding on his rear end. It went unnoticed for too long. Melanoma can appear anywhere on the skin – even in a place that doesn't see the light of day.

- Check all of your skin regularly for changes.
- Look for moles or other spots that are new or have changed in color, shape or size.
- Use a mirror to look behind your back.

DON'T WAIT! Skin cancer can be treated with success if found early.

Funding for this project was provided by the National Cancer Institute, Grant CA210259.
